PROGRAM NOTES

I met Ginsberg in 1973 when at 22, I first came to New York. I stayed at his apartment on 10th St and Avenue C, and occasionally accompanied him in his public readings. Encouraging me to compose, he brought home a Farfisa organ and that was my first experience with an electronic instrument. He also introduced me to Buddhism with the chanting of mantras and meditation. Albeit unconventional, some form of mentoring took place and I have always felt deeply connected to his life and work. I interpreted his texts from the point of view of Mahayana—the “great path” of compassion, in the sense of caring for humanity at large. In his poems, I heard his voice (Allen, baritone), and other voices in his head, extensions of his consciousness: I created the characters of the muses Freedom (soprano) and Compassion (mezzo soprano) to interact with him. Generally, I stayed very close to Allen’s train of thought, alternatively introspective and expansive, edgy, playful or lyrical, sometimes triggering hints of different musical styles, but twice removed, never as direct quotes. It was like making film music with images provided by his consciousness - until the melody found its way of taking over: I broke free from the obvious narrative over music approach, every word is sung, even the most unlikely.

In Waking in New York, Allen Ginsberg is represented in the later part of his life, often reflecting on his aging body and how long he has left to live. He is immersed in a continuous dialogue with Freedom and Compassion – freedom as the very essence of his style (stream-of-consciousness form), and compassion as what drives his concerns (content). Ginsberg sees other people’s lives and feels for them. He switches back and forth between the concrete and the abstract, the emotional and the intellectual, with outbursts of uninhibited lyricism and mini-dramas, in the unique and colorful texture that reflects his personality.

In Act I, Ginsberg is what Buddhists call “being ordinary,” just living his life day after day, moment by moment, focused on the present. From his apartment in the East Village, he is transparent: he tells us everything, his state of mind, his bodily functions, his illnesses, his food, his work, his political causes, all in the same breath (May Days 1988). And suddenly, he stops to look at the beauty of a tree or the odd shape of a rooftop. He finds poetry in an exhaust pipe! (Lunchtime). He goes out and tells stories about the people who live in his building—the Russian landlady, the concentration camp survivor, the girl who had the car accident, the junkie—and the odd mix of characters who inhabit his neighborhood, from winos to yuppies (The Charnel Ground).

The second act opens with Allen’s humorous, brief a cappella Personals Ads, wittily relating to his sexual orientation. In Act II, Allen expresses his love of life. His thoughts are focused on the values that he believes in: sincerity (Jumping the Gun on the Sun), individuality (Manhattan Thirties Flash), love (Song): “The weight of the world is love,” and compassion (Waking in New York). A down-to-earth, occasionally satirical vision of the world alternates with moments of deep emotion and grand lyricism. Waking in New York, the actual poem, is broken into three separate parts: part one contains a hymn to New York: “O New York, O now our bird” and a reference to the Kennedy assassination. Part two has the “child, poking his black head out of the womb, like the pupil of an eye” in gospel style. Part three ends the piece with a hymn to the future of humanity: “That all beggars be fed, all dying medicined, all the loveless tomorrow be loved, well come and be balm.”

Detailed description: The musical score consists of five staves. The top three staves represent the vocal parts: F. (soprano), C. (mezzo-soprano), and A. (alto). The bottom two staves represent the piano: F. (treble clef) and A. (bass clef). The vocal parts sing in G major. The piano part includes harmonic analysis with Roman numerals and time signature changes. The vocal parts sing lyrics in a rhythmic style that matches the piano's harmonic changes. The piano part uses eighth-note patterns in some measures and quarter-note patterns in others.

Contrabass

The musical score consists of six staves of music for Contrabass. The first staff starts with a pickup of four notes followed by measure 13. Measure 13 begins with a dotted half note, followed by eighth-note pairs connected by slurs. Measures 14 through 17 show more complex patterns of eighth and sixteenth notes with slurs and grace notes. Measure 18 continues the rhythmic pattern. Measure 19 starts with a single eighth note followed by a sixteenth-note pattern. Measure 20 concludes with a single eighth note.

Jumping the Gun on the Sun

$\text{♩} = 110$

The musical score consists of four staves. The top three staves are in treble clef and common time (indicated by a '4'). The bottom staff is in bass clef and common time. The vocal parts are labeled on the left: 'Freedom', 'Compassion', and 'Allen Ginsberg'. The piano part is labeled 'Piano' and includes a brace grouping it with the vocal staves. The lyrics 'Jum-ping the gun' and 'on the sun' are written below each corresponding vocal line. The piano part features eighth-note chords.

The score continues with three vocal parts: 'F.' (treble clef), 'C.' (treble clef), and 'A.' (bass clef). The lyrics 'Sin-ce - ri - ty' and 'is the key— to li-ving in e - ter - ni-ty—' are shown under the first two staves. The third staff, labeled 'A.', shows a harmonic bass line. The piano part from the previous page continues at the bottom, providing harmonic support.
